not long in coming. A score or so of Germans lay writhing in a heap after a futile assault, and I got the range for my eighteen-pounder and waited.

"Sure enough, in twenty minutes or so out came an ambulance, with I guess a dozen soldiers as nonchalantiy as you please and feeling safe as a clock, as they had every reason to feel. They got their wounded abourd and were just starting back when I blew the whole damned lot to hell and gone. Of course, I got it in the neck at headquarters the next morning, but they let our ambulances alone after that."

In reprisal for the Germans shooting of reversed bullets—which indict frightful wounds—a Britsh officer, American by birth and a Princeton man, stood up twenty-four German prisoners in a row and with his own hand shot them dead, one after the other, says the New York World. George Harvey, writing from London on "England Today" in the North American Review, repeats the story as the officer told it while in London on six months' sick leave.

"You know, sir, I love my Tommies," said the officer; "by God, love 'em, and that's all there is to it; and it about breaks my heart to have to leave 'em to take in a new battery. Well, anyhow, it was a beastly little scrimmage at best, but what do you suppose those scoundrels did? Why, God danm 'em, they—but say, did you ever see a body mangled by reversed bullets? No? Well, dont; that's all I have to say.

"Seven of my boys went in a heap, and we were in a bad way when some fresh lads came up and gave them the steel. When it was over, we had twenty-four white feathers on our hands quite ready to slip over to nice comfortable quarters around here and receive boquets and chewing gum from Lord Haldane's friends. And mind you, they were my prisoners.

"We found the reversed bullets in their runs all right, remember that."

"Sure enough, in twenty minutes or so out came an ambulance, with I guess a dozen soldiers as onchalantic, a clock, as they had even you please and feeling safe as a clock, as they had ever jues and feeling safe as a clock, as they had ever jues and feeling safe as a clock, as they had ever jues and feeling safe as a clock, as they had ever jues and feeling safe as a clock, as they had ever jues and feeling safe as a clock, as they had ever jues the they let. They got their wounded aboard and sever just at the deadquarters the next morning, but that."

Great Turning to God as Result of World War.

Great Turning to God as Result of World War.

(Times Dispatch.)

In the case of the present war men are practing about causes, and their hearts are failing them for fear because the trend of events seems to be contrary to their desires. One can almost fancy that he hearts again the mild voice of the man of Galilee saying, "(0 ye of little faith!" God has a cause at stake in this world contest, although the feeble mind of man may not yet have fathomed it in all its fallness, and the war will go on until that cause has triumphed or its eventual triumph is assured in the upheavals that are to follow its ending. This conviction is beginning to dawn of Christianity, but from all directions onne reports confirmative of reports reviously published that the predictions made one year ago of a great turning of men to God as a result of this conflict are being fulfilled in an everwhelming manner. From Indianal China come mission reports that, instead of being chilled by the spectage of Christian nations at war, the ainds of the people are more open han ever to the appeal of the Chrisian with the spread of the religious spirit an the trenches, army camps and other circles of the nations at war. The world is becoming a melting pot, as was the case prior to the physical advent of the Christ 2,000 years ago, hough in a different way and from a different cause. It doth not yet appear what form the outcome will take but God is in it, and his people can rust Him.

A special dispatch from Grunday on

A special displace from Grunday on the 17th instant, says:

To be cast adrift in mid stream on nothing more waterproof than the bed of a stage conch was the experience of II. H. Asberry, of the D. J. Phipp Construction Company, of Roanoke J. F. Hurt, of the West Virginia Adjustment Company, and B. H. Cooper a builder and contractor, the latte two from Bluefield, W. Va., while the ware making their way to this town recently.

Mr. Asberry came here for the purpose of getting building contracts while the other two men were on their way to make adjustments, following the fire which on the morning of the ember 25th damaged the town to the extent of $250,000.00

The experience, however, which the encountered, and which they relate to citizens of this town while the dried their clothes and toasted the toes, occurred while they were traversing the rugged road from Maney to Grundy. They took passage of the hack which daily carries the main from Matney to Grundy and surrendered themselves to the mercica of R. S. Ellis, the driver.

Recent rains had swollen the streams and the passengers, being unaccustomed to the 1 ther trying procedure of fording turbulent streams, expressed great concern for their own safety at each crossing. Mr. Ellis assured them, however, that there was no danger and three streams were crossed in safety, though the water was over the wheels and reached the bottom of the wagon bed.

At the fourth crossing, however, where the current was noticeably strong and where the water had cut away the banks at the approaches to the ford, the passengers again protested. They were reassured again by the driver, however, and proceeded to cross the water.

About midway between the banks, Ir the wagon dropped in the water had evidence they have the stream and the horses landed him safely on the bank. If the wagon dropped in the water ham and the passengers were further hampered by the fact that the curtains were down and securely fascened. The wagon were the three passengers considerable baggage and the current bega and anchored.

The passengers managed to drag themselves from the water to the real of the wagon over the wheels and clume there precariously until the driver secured a heavy coal wagon and went to their rescue. The party walked the rest of the way to Grundy, the distance of about half a mile.
